SUGAR FOR 1907

1986 MARKET REVIEWED AND 1907 FORECAS

STATEMENT OF SUGAR COND TIONS-OUTLOOK FOR COMING YEAR PROMISES WELL. CROP ESTIMATES

Czarnikow Macdongall & Co. of Nev York review the sugar market for 190 as follows in their circular for Decen ber 28:

The year opened with cape market strong. Had weather so interfere with grinding in Cuba that in the first week of January fewer factories wer at work than in the last week of De cember, and, as compared with th first week of January, 1905, the num bers were 20 as against 130.

The market responded to those established. Cubas advancing 1-16c to 5-15c, c. f., while centrifugals in stor here advanced 1-8c to 3 3-4c.

The early advent of seasonable wes ther in Cuba changed the aspect of a fairs, and in the middle of January steady decline set in, which by Febru ary 8th had brought Cubas down to be c. f. and duty paid sugars to 3.30

While this was the condition of mar kets here, European markets were de pressed. The year had begun with Beets at 8s 1 1-2d f. o. b., and they ha fluctuated between that price and 8 13-4d, but in the first week in February they declined to 7s 111-4d. Statistics at same time showed European visible supplies of 3,877,500 tons as compared with 2,722,240 tons at the corresponding dates in 1905. By the middle of February Cuba had 174 factories at work and the rate of production was abreast of what it had been at same time in 1905. As the month advanced there was less pres-

March began with a gradual recov ery till Cubas reached 2 1-4c c. f., spot Centrifugals 3 9-16c, and European Eccts 8s 6d f. o. b., but strides in Cuban production, as shown in March re-ceipts at shipping ports averaging 51. 500 tons per week, as against 46,250 ons in same weeks last year, caused renewal of depression which was further aggravated by the appalling calamity which overtook San Fran-cisco in April. On 23d April Cubas

f. o. b., equal to 2.41g c. f., for Cubas and Cuba was giving away .38c or .04c more than its preferential of .337c. The low prices ruling here us compared with Europe, led to stor-ing of Porto Ricos and Cubas and to transshipment of San Domingos from

During May this market remained steady at 21-16c c. f. for Cubas, al-though there was great depression in European Beets, which declined to a new low level, viz.: 7s 9 3-4d f. o. b.,

induced largely by "liquidations of the May account."

June opened with, for the first time in two months, receipts at the Atlantic ports less than meltings, and with a marked decline in the number of centrais at work in Cuba. This caused a hardening tendency. The middle of the month brought news of torrential and in Europe and a general advance in prices.

July opened with a very strong ma store at 3.75c, which brought cane sugars here up to the parity of beets.

The month closed with spot Centrifu gals at 3.89c and Cubas at 2.45c c. f.
